Inflation is a sustained rise in the general price level of goods and services.

Central banks raise interest rates to reduce consumer demand and bring inflation down.